Responsibility for the tragic war in Tigray is being laid at the door of Ethiopia's Prime Minister, Abiy Ahmed. But the real culprit is further north.

Eritrea's President Isaias has plotted and schemed ever since his forces captured Asmara in 1991. Not satisfied with turning his own country into the most repressive state in Africa – without a functioning constitution, parliament, press or freedom of speech, assembly or religious expression – he has intervened in every one of his neighbours.
